
Russian and East European Studies (undergraduate)

The cross-disciplinary concentration in Russian and East European studies permits the student to gain a broad, interdisciplinary knowledge of one of the most important areas in the world—Russia and Eastern Europe. Requirements for the concentration are: two Russian or Soviet history courses, two political science courses in the Soviet area, one Russian literature course (240, 241, or 380), and RUSS 101—305.

Students spending a semester in Moscow under the SUNY-Moscow University exchange may, upon approval of the director, satisfy some requirements abroad.
