Collaboration and partnerships are the key components of our vision for career services, which is why the Fleishman Center has structured our staff in a way that enables this and measures part of our success around collaboration data. We recognize that there are others across campus who can assist us with our mission of helping students find meaningful careers and prepare for life after Binghamton, and have adopted a Community model as a result. Career Communities are comprised of a core set of consultants and industry experts who help students with tailored interests. These Communities serve as liaisons to various entities and also conduct outreach to and collaborative programming with faculty, students, employers, alumni, student organizations and others. For any questions or to engage in further discussions, please feel free to connect with any of the career community leaders at any time.
