Dr. Judith Fleishman graduated from Harpur College in 1990 with a BA in psychology. She continued her education at Adelphi University, earning both a MA and PhD in psychology.

Fleishman is a psychologist and has done research on the effects of competition and competence feedback on intrinsic motivation and quality of performance. She taught at Adelphi University as an adjunct professor for 8 years and is a former consultant for Westchester Institute for Human Development.

She has a love of libraries and spent a considerable amount of time in the Binghamton University Science Library while an undergraduate student. This was the deciding factor in the designation of the Fleishman’s major gift to the University Libriaries in 2000, The Garczynski Fleishman Fund for the Psychology Collection in the Binghamton University Libraries.

Fleishman and her husband Steven Fleishman ’91, U.S. utilities analyst for Wolfe Trahan & Co., live in Manhasset, N.Y. with their three children: Ryan, Emma and Dennis. The Fleishman’s each have brothers who attended Binghamton University as well: Kevin Garczynski ’00 and Daniel Fleishman ’94.
