

Professional Development Resources (campus)

Binghamton University is committed to the success of its students, including career development and job placement resources. Two offices that you will find especially helpful are The Graduate School and the Fleischman Center for Career Development.

Graduate School resources include the Graduate Community of Scholars, a University Teaching Certificate, a Community College Teaching Certificate, Three Minute Thesis Competition, and more.

<https://www.binghamton.edu/grad-school/professional-development/index.html>

The Fleischman Center offers a wealth of resources:

<https://careertools.binghamton.edu/channels/graduate-student/>

The Binghamton University Center for Teaching and Learning offers a variety of workshops and individual consultations to help graduate students as well as faculty sharpen their teaching skills:

<https://www.binghamton.edu/clt/index.html>

The Institute for Advanced Studies in the Humanities (IASH) offers one-semester fellowships for Ph.D. students and also a very helpful site on preparing proposals for external funding:

<https://www.binghamton.edu/iash/funding/>

<https://www.binghamton.edu/iash/funding/tips.html>