DUPLICATION POLICIES

Special Collections will allow its material to be reproduced under the following conditions:

- ☞ Special Collections must approve any and all methods of reproducing its material and reserves the right to designate or refuse a specific method, as the condition of the requested material and preservation policy require. Special Collections will retain all negatives of reproductions.
- ☞ Only material which will not be physically damaged by the process of duplication may be reproduced. Special Collections reserves the right to refuse to copy material which may be damaged in the process.
- ☞ Duplication requests which are not reasonably specific or which require subjective criteria for selection of material to be reproduced cannot be processed.
- ☞ Complete collections, or extensive portions thereof will not be reproduced.
- ☞ Restricted material may not be reproduced without permission.
- ☞ Reproductions of materials from the Special Collections Department may be made without prior permission only for use in the research, teaching, or private study of the recipient of the reproduction. Reproductions may not be made for or donated to other repositories by the recipient and may not be further reproduced without permission.
- ☞ Permission to consult or reproduce manuscripts does not imply copyright permission and does not constitute authorization to publish them. See sections below on copyright and on "Publication of Special Collections Materials."
- ☞ The recipient agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Binghamton University, its officers, employees and agents from and against all suits, claims, actions and expenses arising out of the use of reproductions provided by the Special Collections Department.

NOTICE WARNING CONCERNING COPYRIGHT RESTRICTIONS

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

The institution reserves the right to refuse a copying order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copyright law.

Researchers may consult the U.S. Copyright Office at the Library of Congress site for further information and resources to assist in finding copyright holders.

PUBLICATION OF SPECIAL COLLECTIONS MATERIALS

Special Collections material cannot be used for publication without regard for the copyright law of the United States and the laws of libel. Responsibility for obtaining permission to publish rests with the researcher and his publishers. The reproduction of Special Collections material for private study, scholarship, or research does not constitute permission to publish.

Binghamton University makes no representation of the exclusive rights of copyright ownership unless such rights have been given to the University.

The use of material furnished by Special Collections in publication should be formally acknowledged. The proper citation for Special Collections is: Name of Collection (e.g., Max Reinhardt Archive), Special Collections, Binghamton University Libraries, Binghamton University, State University of New York.

Special Collections would appreciate receiving a complimentary copy of any publication deriving from its books, manuscripts or archives.
