We invite graduate students from all disciplines to submit proposals to Binghamton University’s sixth biennial sociology graduate student conference. This year’s theme will explore crisis, revolution and counter-revolution. Coming 100 years after the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia that changed the trajectory of world politics and economy, the world seems to be in the midst of similarly (counter?) revolutionary changes in political, economic, social, and ecological spheres.

What can we learn from similar historical moments? How do we understand the current moment of cleavage? What else is emerging? Below are broad suggestions however, we welcome any and all submissions, regardless of the theme.

- Revolutionary and counter-revolutionary movements past and present
- Movements and struggles for recognition and rights
- Nationalism and populism: Left and Right
- Fascism and anti-fascism
- The fate of internationalism and neoliberalism
- The future of the nation-state, supranational organizations and autonomist movements
- The present condition and future of labor - locally, nationally and globally
- The ecological crisis and the limits of capitalism and the corresponding green movements
- Feminist theory, approaches, debates

Submission deadline:
Please submit an abstract of no more than 300 words to: sgsu2018conference@gmail.com by March 30th.
