Binghamton University – Health Promotion/REACH Peer Education
Graduate Assistantship

The Health Education program works with campus and community partners to provide support and education using a public health model. The office provides peer education outreach, programming, and personal student consultations on a wide variety of health topics, including sexual health, alcohol and other drugs, interpersonal violence prevention, stress management, and personal self-care. The Graduate Assistant will work to help support the Health Education program and Health Promotion and Prevention Services office to proactively meet the health needs of students at Binghamton University.

Responsibilities:

- Research new self-care initiative opportunities using NCHA data
- Assist Health Promotion Coordinator in developing and coordinating REACH Peer Educator outreach
- Assist Health Promotion Coordinator with peer and campus programming efforts
- Actively pursue current health information and new health trends in order to act as an accurate resource of information for health promotion initiatives
- Update the current events discussion board for class on a weekly basis
- Work with Health Promotion Coordinator to develop creative outreach projects and programs to effectively deliver health information to students at Binghamton University
- Provide assistance with event planning, including the coordination and scheduling of REACH Peer Educators
- Assist with data collection, assessment, and development of monthly reports
- Attend and contribute to weekly staff meetings and in-house training sessions
- Monitor Peer Educator outreach hours and trends on a weekly basis
- Assist with Healthy Campus Initiative integration into Health Education and REACH programming

Qualifications:

- Preference will be given to candidates with a bachelor’s degree in public health, health promotion, higher education, or a related field
- Must be accepted into a Binghamton University graduate program for the 2018-2019 academic year
- Ability to work as a member of a team and with professionals across campus
- Evidence of strong writing skills
- Familiarity with health promotion and prevention strategies and literature
- Experience with statistics: coursework, data analysis
- Strong organizational skills and interpersonal skills
- Ability to manage multiple projects and timelines
- Familiarity with current technology, software, communication, and marketing methods

Stipend:
The assistantship includes a base stipend for the academic year of $9,800, paid biweekly. This position is represented by the Graduate Student Employees Union (GSEU) and stipend includes all potential union-negotiated raises applicable for the academic year. Twenty hours of work per week is expected.

To Apply:
Graduate students interested in this position should submit the general application on the Student Affairs website. Questions related to this position should be directed to Charity Corman at (607) 777-2229 or ccorman@binghamton.edu.